Résumé

Being successful can be a strong motivator. And while that may look different for each of us, we all like to dream about it... customers who can't get enough of your products, high profitability across the business, and shareholders who are thrilled. Success doesn't come overnight, though, and if that's what you're chasing then dreaming is as far as you'll get. It takes day in, day out persistence along with the right approach, the right perspective, and the right strategy to overcome the challenges that make other businesses fail.

As an innovative intrapreneur and strategic/development advisor, I work with companies by developing and implementing the unique approach, perspective, and strategy they need to achieve real success. I draw on 10+ years of experience and 3 international degrees to create effective strategies to achieve long-term sustainability and to propel products to the forefront of their markets. I've delivered notable successes overseeing end-to-end business operations covering both B2C and B2B that encompasses sales, marketing, communication, supply, legal, compliance, development, production, service, etc., beyond Europe and across the globe.

And I absolutely love what I do. There's no matching solving a client's pain point or delighting a customer. So, every day I work to define and implement innovative strategies that influence key decisions relating to operational execution and create value for stakeholders and customers simultaneously. Because that's where growth - for any kind of business - begins.

I'm the kind of person who sees every challenge as an opportunity to create value. If you believe I can be helpful to you or if you simply want to engage in a discussion, don't hesitate to get in touch.
